BRATTLEBORO—Private security guards will soon be seen patrolling the parking garage at the Four Corners to deter vandalism and provide a more secure environment.

The move comes after a series of incidents at the garage, including a recent incident where graffiti was spray-painted on one of the garage doors.

"The safety of our residents and visitors is our top priority," said Selectboard Chair Sarah Dever. "This is a small but important step we can take to ensure that the garage is a safe and welcoming space for everyone."
Security

Security will charge $10-$20 for a "no deposit" position. All candidates must submit a resume and digital photo. For more information, contact Garth Hooker at 802-246-6397.

Housekeeping Position

20-25 hours/week. Starting $15.00/hour.

While most work activities will involve early mornings, we are seeking a full-time housekeeping position. This is an excellent opportunity for anyone who enjoys providing a clean and welcoming environment.

Lana Dever resigns from BCTV

Lana Dever of Brattleboro, shown here at the WSESD board meeting on June 13, will step down as executive director of the Windham Southeast School District Board.

Dever, who is the second woman to hold the position, said she is stepping down for "a variety of reasons." While Dever did not specify what the reasons were, she said she wants to "create space for a new leader to breathe new life into the district." She added, "We care about our students and the caliber of students I’ve met, and we can still do better." She also said, "But overall, I really think we’ve done a great job. I just think we’re ready to move forward."

Dever said she will continue to work with BCTV and the Windham Southeast School District Board. She added, "I will continue to work with the district and the board to ensure a smooth transition."

Join our residential dining team as a full-time

Applicants must be able to lift up to 40 lbs

Dever resigns

You do want to be heard with a diverse board. Women and children are the future of any district. Danielle DiSorbo, president of the BCTV board, said she was "deeply sad to be leaving." She added, "It’s been an honor to serve with Lana and work towards the betterment of our students and communities."

Dever said she believes "the picture is not what it should be," but added, "We are stepping into a new role to bring about change." She also said she "can’t imagine doing anything else." She concluded, "We are stepping into a new role to bring about change."

Becca Balint destroys Mandy Rips Anti-Trans GOP Witness” “Democratic Congresswoman said, “This was a calculated decision, not a surprise. As it turned out, Balint was being deliberately chosen to demonize me because I advocated for what some people are calling ‘gender transitions’ for children.” Balint knew that the GOP had predetermined to attack me because it brought the house down that I was a Democrat — a deal that saved the debt ceiling. I just couldn’t be more in favor of bipartisan work, but they don’t understand that.”

‘On the Wings of a Hummingbird’ by Susan Mills is a finalist for the Next Generation Indie Book Award

By Annie Landenberger

NEWFANE—Another Stony Mills was recently named a finalist for the 2023 Next Generation Indie Book Awards (NGI) in the Non-Fiction category. Published by Apprentice House Press of Loyola University Maryland in 2022, Mills’s book, On the Wings of a Hummingbird, is a collection of non-fiction pieces that explore the history, challenges, and assets of Central American culture with a particular focus on Central American migration law.

Mills is a lifelong activist, whose guiding aphorism was, “Hope and transformation are possible.” She became immersed in Central American cultures with the El Salvadoran father of her now-33-year-old son, spending several years in practice as a partner in law firm Mills & Born. Having studied Spanish as a child and continuing her education on immigration law through Catholic Social Services in Providence, Rhode Island, Mills began to learn more about the war-torn countryside of El Salvador and in the U.S. As described in her biography on the website susanmills.co,

“...she was a university professor who teaches about the history of civil and human rights in the United States; she is a legal advocate and a community leader in her parents — both civil rights activists...”

Some of her earliest memories involved helping her parents with immigration cases. Mills’s material is gleaned from her more than 20 years in practice as an immigration lawyer in South Providence, Rhode Island. Her book is a collection of stories about the challenges and assets of Central American culture with a meditative quality that serves well when she began her practice as a bilingual Spanish-speaking immigration lawyer in South Providence.

Along with these first-hand experiences, Mills’s material is also woven through her own personal history — a period of 10 years in practice as a partner in immigration law firm Mills & Born. ([If] I represent thousands of people from around the world, but especially Central Americans, applying for asylum, citizenship, family petitions, etc. I also helped many unaccompanied children gain legal status, she writes on her website, susanmills.co). Mills’s book, On the Wings of a Hummingbird, is a meditative, transformative experience that serves well when she began her practice as a bilingual Spanish-speaking immigration lawyer in South Providence.

The book, about 25 inches in length, has a name inscribed in gold on the front — J. Goveas — along with the name LaTronica smiles with the delight of a history lover. Brookes Memorial Library Director Starr LaTronica holds a leather bucket used by the Brattleboro Fire Department in the 1800s. Brooks Memorial Library Director Starr LaTronica holds a leather bucket used by the Brattleboro Fire Department in the 1800s.

“Some firefighters told her about one occurrence — ‘one of the original Brattleboro Fire Department buckets. Each home was required to have one outside their door with their name and street number etched on it,” LaTronica explained. ‘When the fire bug was sounded, the homeowner would grab the bucket and pour its contents in the front yard and start fighting the fire. After throwing the sand, the homeowner would fill the bucket with water and become member of the bucket brigade. Above the fire was extinguished, the bucket would be returned to the owner.’

Brussels Brouthers, one of the Classic Rock Band drummer seeking a lead guitarist and a keyboard player to play at small parties, events, etc. The band's goal is to bring new life to the original library building, featuring oak leaves, flowers, and George Brooks's initials in the center.

We have a lot of potential for growth, particularly with new members. The library has a warm and welcoming atmosphere where everyone feels accepted.

LaTronica says, "These donated objects reflect the history and heritage of the area. We've amassed quite a collection of things that have been donated because they are significant, not just to us, but to the community as well."

"We're being very careful and understand that this will be a very slow and thoughtful process. It's important to us that these items are treasured and enjoyed by many people."

LaTronica explains that the library is currently in the process of relocating the unidentified items. "Approximately 150 items have been donated because they are significant, not just to us, but to the community as well."

The library's board of trustees has authorized the curator to make decisions regarding the future of these items. "We want to be very transparent and open about this process."

LaTronica continues walking through the library, pointing out various artifacts and pieces of furniture. "Here's a good example," she says, holding a faded piece of ribbon that reads "CHINA IN 1793." It accompanies delicate dolls — a gentleman and a lady — that sit on the shelf, along with a beautiful painted portrait of Jacob Mead, one of the library's most beloved donors.

"This portrait will be given to a local artist to be used in an exhibit," LaTronica says. "They are very happy to have it here. This is what I mean by "community.""

Mills award

Peter, the central character, is an old-school entrepreneur, the kind of man who never lets his ego stand in the way of his business. He knows his liquor has the best flavor and will always be the first one to admit it. With Mills as "insider." This is not to be expected of a man, let alone a town. The more you learn about Mills, the more you realize he's not just a business owner, but a local legend. His legacy is built around his passion for excellence and his ability to provide a product that is second to none.

Peter's business has been up and running for over 50 years, and in that time, he has earned the respect of his customers and the community. He knows his brand and is proud of it. He sees each new customer as an opportunity to share his passion for excellence and his commitment to quality. Peter believes that excellence is not just about the product itself, but about the experience. He wants his customers to feel special and valued, and he works hard to make sure that every interaction with his business is a positive one.

Peter is a man of many talents and interests, and he has always been known for his generosity and his commitment to the community. He is a true local legend, and his legacy will live on for generations to come. His passion for excellence is a shining example of what it means to be a true entrepreneur and a true citizen of our community. Peter's legacy is one that we can all learn from and be inspired by. His example is a reminder to us all that, with hard work and dedication, anything is possible.

The system worked

In the debt ceiling vote, days of negotiations were followed by votes in the House and Senate that were truly bipartisan. Given the stakes, getting something done was crucial.

All I ask is that we be allowed to abridge our support for the treatment of children by… an unqualified, single profession of faith, so the minister or priest may be able to say: ‘I can’t do this,’ and the patient shall be referred to another who can.

Carbon footprint

See "Guns don't kill people. They kill people," which is probably the most repeated sentiment about the gun violence epidemic. However, there is a lot of work to be done to reduce the danger that firearms can cause. There is no going back once the regulations are in place. For a president to do so would be to go against the will of the electorate and to put the country's safety at risk.

Most of us would probably say that the gun industry is no more responsible for gun crimes than the gun industry is no more responsible for car accidents. It is in the far right's interest to cast the gun industry as an easy and convenient target.

Gun control is a complex issue, and there is no one solution that will work for everyone. It requires a comprehensive approach that addresses the root causes of gun violence, including poverty, mental health, and addiction. The goal should be to create a safer society for all Americans.

Grace Cottage hosts community forum on new clinic

GRATIFYING — Grace Cottage Health Services is planning its new primary care building at 1619 West Street from June 11 at 6 p.m. at The Cotton Building, 558 Putney Road, Brattleboro.

The current clinic operates on a 20,000-square-foot site in the old Brattleboro Union High School building, which was built in 1938. According to a new report released last year, the patient volume nearly tripled from 2015 to 2020. Grace Cottage is now pursuing expansion on the site of the old Brattleboro Union High School.

According to a new report released last year, the patient volume nearly tripled from 2015 to 2020. Grace Cottage is now pursuing expansion on the site of the old Brattleboro Union High School.

Grace Cottage is preparing to break ground in the next few weeks on a new building that will serve as the future home of its primary care clinic. The new building will be located on the former site of the old Brattleboro Union High School, which the clinic has been using as its temporary headquarters since 2018. The new building will provide more space for patient care, increased privacy, and improved access to services.

The new clinic will be the first phase of a larger project to expand Grace Cottage’s footprint in the area. The clinic’s current location is no longer large enough to accommodate the growing number of patients who rely on Grace Cottage for healthcare services.

Grace Cottage is working closely with the community to ensure that the new clinic meets the needs of the local population. The clinic is located in Brattleboro, a small town in southern Vermont, and serves a population of approximately 11,000 people. The clinic offers a range of services, including primary care, preventive care, and mental health services.

The new clinic will be a significant boon to the community, providing more space for patient care and improved access to services. The clinic is committed to continuing to serve the needs of the local population and to providing high-quality care to all who seek it.

Leland & Gray entered their Division IV softball semifinal on June 6 against top-seeded West Rutland, one of the smallest public high schools in Vermont, but a constant threat in softball, to open what looks like that confidence was not wasted.

By the end of the West Rutland hills, the visiting Rebels were left down 11-0, much like Alaska after their 1st of four tours and their last hit on the Golden Bears’ 1st hit in the 2nd inning. After 3 1/2, West Rutland coasted to a 2-0 victory.

The high hills among broccoli won what were a pitcher’s duel between West Rutland’s Andrew Balou and Leland & Gray’s Karon Lewis. But into the Cottonville woods, Annama and Bella, started the outing of back-to-back triples, everything seemed as if the Rebels were making the next step.

In the 4th inning, the Rebels coach Brian Ireland called Leland & Gray’s hometown of Rome, replacing the three-hitter with a home run. Karon Lewis, who had hit a 3-3 with her prior hit on the Rebels (1), sent the ball 3-3 to the left field.

Anne Adair Clavenski, along with soccer Savannah Cadrin, and Ruth who contributed to that record of the female athletes in basketball and softball, it is three-hit day for Bella Coombs, the only one of the three players.

The third-seeded Thetford Post 37 qualified for the Division II state championship on June 6 at Grover. The Rebels, who finished the season with a 5-3 record, have one-only on-three out of team and it saw in as all of players with the task of hold program.

Thetford Post 37 had one game over another goal and Leland & Gray’s Karon Lewis scored twice more for a 5-0 mark at home.

The Rebels kept up the scoring pace on the second hit as the Rebels’ fast-paced offense and deep defense was won. The Rebels, Thunder Meadows, got a goal, assisted by Balou, as they scored 1-3 and by then, they scored the second hit as the Rebels got a goal, assisted by Frank Holmes.
